

What is the procedure to cope with sebum and skin pores in autumn season?

Dr. Hyeong-seok Ko

Academic Director of Korean Academy of Primary Care / Botox Filler Academy instructor of Korean Academy of Primary Care
Director of Korean Society for Nanomedicine / Head of the Samsung Lohas Clinic (Jeonju, Korea)

Ms. Kim Ji-hyeon, an office worker (age 31, female, from Jeonju, Jeonbuk), is worried about skin trouble and sagging skin generated during the change of seasons in autumn. Even if she does cleansing after removing makeup, her skin looks saggier and is always oily due to increased sebum and noticeable pores.

Although she regularly used peeling products which are effective for exfoliating and nose packs to remove blackheads, she couldn't see any noticeable effects. So she visited a dermatology clinic and received skin counseling. The doctor advised her to continuously take care of her skin pores.

In particular, women aged around 30 should pay more attention to skin care because skin elasticity gets lower and pores expand due to increased sebum secretion. Some people wash their face too often for pore care. However, as frequent face washing can remove skin oil excessively and thus promote sebum secretion, it should be avoided.

"If sebum secretion is not controlled and symptoms are serious, it can be improved through fractional RF(GFR) treatment at a dermatology clinic"

Ko Hyeong-seok, director of Samsung Lohas in Jeonju.

Home care for noticeable pores and sagging skin has limitations for improvement. In these cases, a lifting procedure called ULTRAcel can be considered. In the ULTRAcel procedure, pores can be treated with a three-in-one lifting complex procedure device and ultrasonic waves can be intensively delivered to SMAS deep inside skin that ultrasonic waves cannot reach with existing lasers. Therefore, an excellent lifting effect can be expected.

"If sebum secretion is not controlled and symptoms are serious, it can be improved through fractional RF(GFR) treatment at a dermatology clinic" said Hyeong-seok Ko, director of Samsung Lohas in Jeonju. "Women who are worried about pores and sagging skin will obtain satisfactory results from the ULTRAcel lifting procedure."

